Manager, Wildlife Research

Department of Environment

Igloolik, Nunavut

This position is a Headquarters position located in Igloolik and reporting to the Director of Wildlife Management. The position supervises a research program carried out by a team of 14 biologists and technicians.

The Wildlife Research Manager oversees wildlife research and management programs to address GN responsibilities relating to conservation and sustainable use of wildlife under the Wildlife Act and the Nunavut Lands Claims Agreement. The Manager ensures Nunavut's positions and priorities are considered in wildlife research, management and conservation initiatives at the territorial, national and/or international level. The incumbent's primary responsibility is to supervise the staff and administer the activities of the Wildlife Research section of the Department of Environment, and to provide biological reviews and advice to other sections, agencies and the public.

Educational requirements are: a PhD or Master's degree and 4 years experience managing a wildlife research program with at least 5 years supervisory experience;

Or, a Bachelor of Science Degree with at least 10 years experience managing Wildlife Research programs with 5 years supervisory experience.

Past field research experience is necessary. Strong analytical and writing skills for development of reports, briefing notes, presentations etc. are required. Critical and analytical skills relevant to scientific research techniques should be complemented by an awareness and sensitivity to the requirements for Inuit Qaujimagatuqangit in Departmental initiatives.

Equivalencies that consist of a combination of education, knowledge, skills and abilities equal in worth to the formal education and experience requirements will be considered.

This Position offers a Salary range between $86,912 - $98,612 per annum. This position is also entitled to a Northern Allowance of $20,480 per annum.
